MONIQUE DUPLESSIS

The people of LSU Law School have strived to break free of the stereotype attached to we men and women of the legal profession by "sharing and caring." Monique Duplessis, dear and precious friend and student of LSU, was recently diagnosed with chronic leukemia. The recommended treatment has been a bone marrow transplant which requires a lengthy and unfortunately costly search for a donor and other associated expenses, for which her insurance company has disclaimed any liability. Many wonderfully caring people associated with the law school, including many faculty members, staff members, and a large number of students, have struggled to raise these essential funds. Fund raisers have included a fun-filled TGIF and a Gourmet Jambalaya lunch. SBA unselfishly donated a percent of proceeds from Race Judicata and Assault and Battery. As friends and classmates of Monique, we thank you. We appreciate the effort to support not only a wonderful individual but also a better image of our chosen profession.
