EDITORIAL

THE LAW SCHOOL

The Law School opened its thirty-sixth session with an enrollment of seventy-one students. By classes the enrollment is: first year 25; second year 18; and third year 28. This marked decline in enrollment (31.8%) is a reflection of the general tendency in American law schools this year resulting from the present national emergency. Last year a group deferment was accorded to all students registered in colleges and universities to enable them to complete the academic year. Since July 1st, deferment or postponement of induction has been on an individual basis and the effect of the Selective Service Act has been felt not only in the number of students who have been inducted into the military service, but also in the number of students who are discouraged from undertaking a lengthy professional course faced with the prospect of inability to complete the work for the degree prior to induction. In addition, a number of advanced law students
