THE DIGITAL DIGEST

The Louisiana Law Review recently launched its official blog, The Digital Digest.¹ The Digital Digest is intended to foster legal education in Louisiana by engaging scholars and practitioners in the discussion of timely, relevant legal issues. The Digest will frequently supplement the print journal by publishing short commentaries and essays on legal developments in Louisiana and beyond. By cultivating timely communication across various segments of Louisiana's legal community, the Digest seeks to harness the value of scholarly insight that may otherwise be forgone due to the time constraints and traditional format of the law review editorial process. The Board of Editors welcomes submissions for The Digital Digest from scholars, professors, and practitioners.

LSU JOURNAL OF ENERGY LAW AND RESOURCES

The Editors and Associates of the Louisiana Law Review are proud to welcome the newly formed LSU Journal of Energy Law and Resources (JELR). The JELR was established by students at the LSU Paul M. Hebert Law Center in November of 2011 and is the Law Center's second student-edited academic journal. We congratulate the JELR on their inaugural issue, published in Fall of 2012.

1. The Digital Digest, LOUISIANA LAW REVIEW, <http://lawreview.law.lsu.edu/category/forum/>.

The Articles in this issue were primarily inspired by presentations at the Louisiana Law Review's 2012 Symposium, Coastal Land Loss in the Gulf Coast and Beyond, held on March 30, 2012 at the Louisiana State University Paul M. Hebert Law Center. This groundbreaking event brought together legal scholars from around the country to discuss the potential legal barriers to coastal land protection and the overarching ramifications that coastal land loss poses to coastal zone inhabitants. The Symposium was presented by The George W. & Jean H. Pugh Institute for Justice. The Board of Editors is indebted to LSU Law Professor John Costonis and thanks him for his assistance in moderating the event, as well as for his contribution to this issue.
