ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Senior Editorial Board of Volume I of the LSU Journal of Energy Law and Resources is pleased to dedicate our inaugural volume to Professor Melissa Lonegrass¹ and Ms. Beth Williams,² without whom this initiative would not have been possible. From the beginning, they have acted not only as journal advisors but also as mentors, steering us through a process unprecedented at the LSU Law Center. Their guidance has helped transform our vision as first-year law students into a reality. Without knowing whether our vision for the Journal would come to fruition, they were dedicated to the project and confident in our abilities. We are deeply grateful to them for their generosity, patience, and unwavering support, without which we could not have succeeded. After nearly three years of determination and hard work, it is immensely rewarding to finally see the Journal printed. We could not have reached this point without Professor Lonegrass and Ms. Williams.

The Senior Editorial Board would also like to extend its heartfelt gratitude to the additional individuals who contributed to the prosperity of the Journal. In particular, Chancellor Jack Weiss's invaluable support of this project and vision for the future of the Law Center has been essential to its success. Additionally, Professor Patrick Martin's expertise was critical to shaping the direction and content of the Journal, and Mrs. Vickie Landry's indispensable experience in publication and administration has facilitated the successful production of Volume I. Finally, the Senior Editorial Board would like to thank the many other members of the Paul M. Hebert Law Center, including the faculty and the student body, who have contributed to the success of the Journal.
